

Our Commitment to Philadelphia Public Schools

In 2016, if you buy or sell a house in Philadelphia with a member of the Fresh Quarters team, Fresh Quarters will donate 1% of our earned commission to your local elementary public school catchment.

Philadelphia is a top notch city with great culture, nightlife and people. It's about time that its schools were as highly regarded and properly funded. Wonderful community groups of involved parents and neighbors are building in force to raise funds for local catchment schools to help improve them and help guarantee that all students have access to a quality education. These students will be our future leaders and help Philadelphia continue its renaissance.

Here at Fresh Quarters, for the last several years we have been investing in our communities and educating ourselves on local public catchment schools. We acknowledge that we as real estate agents can play a big role in informing buyers about local school options.

As continued commitment to Philadelphia and its public schools and its children, beginning in 2016, all of our listings will feature the local elementary catchment.

It's a simple thing we can do to start the conversation of what your local school might be if you buy our listing.

In 2016, to further this goal, if you buy or sell a house in Philadelphia with a member of the Fresh Quarters team, Fresh Quarters will donate 1% of our earned commission to your local elementary public school catchment.
